1. At Hsingshutun (122-09, 39-16) in the vicinity of Tengshaho (Chengshaho, 122-04, 39-12), the construction of a military camp was begun in early April 1947. The barracks were built similar to Mongolian yurts, but sheet metal was used instead of the usual felt. At the end of April all work on the camp ceased, but has since been resumed.
2. The Soviets are using Malitzu (馬里子) (Matotzu, 122-10, 39-12 ?) Island, east of Tengshaho, as a target area for airforce bombing and artillery practice. Every two or three days aircraft fly from Chengchiatun (122-03, 39-13) /Chiangchiatun ?/ and practice bombing. Sometimes windsocks are attached to the aircraft to serve as targets for anti-aircraft practice. Over 2000 families which lived on Malitzu Island were evacuated by Soviet authorities in February 1947.
3. The present commander of Soviet forces in Chinchou (121-43, 39-07) is Major Gen. Goluchik (Chinese phoneticization). The former commander of Chinchou has been recalled to Port Arthur.
4. Outside of Chinchou, southwest of the highway to Takushan (121-51, 38-59), there are 100 Soviet troops. In Chinchou there are twenty Soviet soldiers, most of whom are specialists (technicians ?). Just west of the Chinchou-Lungwangmiao /Lungwangmiao, 121-41, 39-09/ area there are 500 Soviet troops.
5. There are 500 Soviet troops stationed along the highway between Chinchou and Dairen.
6. There are 1500 Soviet troops in the Tengshaho area.
7. There are twenty Soviet troops in Shihho (121-51, 39-20).
8. In early July 100 fully equipped Soviet soldiers boarded sailing vessels at Chinchou Bay (121-40, 39-07) and went north, possibly to garrison the islands around Fuchou Bay (121-20, 39-42). (Peiping Note: Hsima, 121-27, 39-12, Tungmayi 121-29, 39-12, and Lu 121-34, 39-12 Islands? The islands near Fuchou Bay are north of the 39-20 parallel.)
